

Of major interest and value, this volume presents in English the essential writings of Vissarion Belinsky, Nicolai Chernyshevsky, and Nicolai Dobrolyubov, the gifted and formidable founders of Russian literary and social criticism. The sense of social responsibility, political commitment, and moral vision informing Russian literature is a product of a critical tradition established in the middle third of the 19th century. Included in this book are the fundamental critical writings of these men, establishing a critical doctrine of vast importance to the progress of Russian letters.
