

From the Caves and Jungles of Hindostan is Blavatsky's philosophical and esoteric travelogue through India. It is filled with colorful descriptions, often quite humorous, of flora and fauna, customs and mythology, ancient ruins and modern cities of late nineteenth century India. Delightful and inspiring. And for theosophists it's also full of ideas about occultism. "Extremely interesting" it is well worth reading. There is one mysterious person who occasionally appears, Takur Gulab-Lal-Sing, who comes and goes in an occult manner, and is possessed of strange powers; he hypnotizes an artist who, under "biological influence," paints a distant scene instead of one before his eyes; he also "removes" an inconvenience by a "word." -The Westminster Review, Volume 139, January, 1893 "Admirers of the late Madame Blavatsky will turn to this volume with eager curiosity, while those of her enemies who read it will confess she was a clever woman, for they will find a book of fascinating study of Indian manners and customs, enlightened with fine word-pictures of Indian scenery and animal life in the jungle Madame Blavatsky, in her introduction, said that her readers must remember that she never meant this for a scientific work. The reader will, however, find much to instruct as well as to amuse him, and an insight is gained into the character of the remarkable author, the founder in Europe of Theosophy, and whose mantle appears to have descended on Mrs. Besant, another remarkable woman." -The Publishers Circular and Booksellers Record of British and Foreign Literature, Volume 57, July, 1892 A Hindu is a born mystic, and the luxuriant nature of his country has made him a zealous pantheist. -Madame Blavatsky
