

In November 2012, the Young Property Lawyers Forum (YPLF) met in Stellenbosch, South Africa for the Forums third gathering. It is an informal network that brings together young property law researchers from around the world and enables them to discuss their work with each other and with more experienced researchers. On this occasion, a special Master Class was held after the YPLF in which some of the worlds leading property law scholars presented their research. This book contains selected contributions from the third YPLF and the YPLF Masterclass 2012. It offers new perspectives on property theory, constitutional property law, and private law-property law. Under these headings, young and renowned property law scholars present their current research and offer an exciting look into the challenges property law faces in the 21st century.
