

In midst of a world of ambition, greed and class distinctions, Adam Prynn sets out to build a society based on love and mutual respect. He's the right man for the job; he has the vision, and the mandate. The Red Prophet has planted a seed that sets young Adam thinking differently than his peers. The questions he asks make people uncomfortable -- everyone but Zoe, who becomes his wife. Then, he receives the gift of an island, the very island prophesied by the Red Prophet. It's not just any island. Its only other inhabitants, the ever elusive unicorns, testify to that. They speak sometimes -- to those who have ears to listen. Some, among Adam and Zoe's children, and others who come to share the vision, do listen. Some hear other voices. Can Adam, Zoe, and his posterity overcome the darker side of human nature and build a world of equality and justice? Can they make it last, generation after generation? Let's see ...
