

This text provides language skills while giving information in the four major areas of health care: personal and home, community, childrens and adolescents, and women. It teaches the concepts of disease- and accident-prevention as well as health maintenance through a variety of structures. Chapters include two short readings followed by comprehension checks, vocabulary building activities, grammar focuses, co-operative learning exercises, and interactive applied performance tasks, all intended to integrate student learning with a diversity of life experiences and learning styles.
