

Two Widows and the Misdirected Message is the second book in the Two Widows Mystery Series by Pacific Northwest writer, Ruth Ross. Millie Mahoney and her mother, Margaret Cisneros, live in a small suburb of Seattle with their tiny terror of a dog and an overweight cat named Chance the Cat. They are also the proud owners of a brand-new office and a shiny shingle that reads Two Widows Investigations. When the phone rings at two in the morning, it is seldom a good thing. When Millie and Margaret receive just such a call, another adventure can't be far behind. Soon they find themselves on the trail of dark secrets, devious plots, and disturbing wardrobe choices. By the time this escapade is over, at least one rowdy bunch will learn not to stand in the way of The Two Widows and that things are rarely as they seem.
